Colored Pencil with Mixed Media

A SoHo Urban Artist Demo by Barb Sotiropoulos

Creating colored pencil art with mixed media yields dynamic results and can help expand the creative possibilities within your work. Having worked with multiple mediums over the course of my artistic career, it's been hard not to fall in love with the qualities and capabilities that some mediums have. So much so in fact, that I believe this is what drove me to start mixing mediums in my artwork.

In this mixed media demonstration, I'm going to take you through my process using products from the SoHo Urban Artist line available at Jerry's Artarama. If you're an artist on a budget, these products will allow you to create high-quality results without the price tag normally associated with it. From start to finish, SoHo Urban Artist has you covered!

Getting Started

I've done a light-box transfer of my illustration using a non-photo blue pencil on hot press watercolor paper. In my process, I prefer to use hot press water-color paper because the tooth tends to be smoother, which is ideal in combination with the colored pencil layers I'll be applying later.

Using low-tack artist's tape, I then adhere it to my drawing board, covering a quarter of an inch border on all sides. By taping down my paper, it will help counteract any warping that will occur when the paper is wet, and will also leave a crisp, clean, white border when the piece is finished.

The adjustable drawing b oard I am using is lightweight and allows you to work in zero to 80-degree positions. Its smooth surface is paramount for creating detailed works and is great as a level tabletop, which is how I am using it here.

Adjustable Drawing Board

This all-wood drawing board features a smooth maple colored surface that is a full 19.75 x 29.5" in size. Integrated base allows you to easily adjust working angles from flat to 80 degrees. Folds to a thin profile and weighs just 8.3lbs. The bottom edge of the SoHo Adjustable Drawing Board features a sturdy ledge that can hold art tools, small works of art, sketchbooks, paper, panels, or a thin canvas. Cat.#87469 List: $69.95

Sketching

My next step is to sketch out some of the areas. I used the non-photo blue pencil first because I don't want pencil lines showing up in the lighter areas of the drawing.

By using the Ebony Super Soft Dark Graphite pencil in the other areas it will help keep my drawing guidelines intact for when I start blocking in color with the watercolor paint. This pencil allows you to create a variety of tones by varying the pressure that you apply. In this case, I'm applying a light pencil sketch, but if I wanted to create darker and more defined pencil lines, I wouldn't need to switch pencils to do so.

SoHo Ebony Graphite Pencils

The Super Soft Dark Graphite pencil is 3.8mm in diameter and glides over any drawing surface. Create a wide array of subtle gray tones simply by varying hand pressure. Made with precision European craftsmanship, the deep-toned graphite lead is bonded to the wood for durability, and the casing is made of California Cedar, which is considered the best for precision sharpening. Color Blocking & Base Layers

I'm going to establish my base tones and block in large areas of color using watercolor.

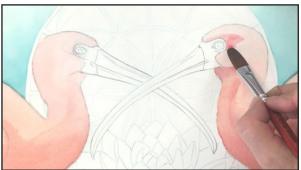

This medium is ideal for this stage because I can build up my tones in layers and create subtle nuances in the color.

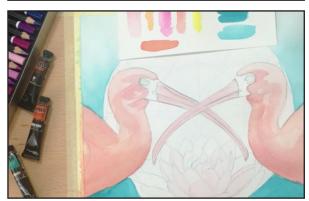

By using the 1/2 inch oval wash brush I'm able to work quickly and precisely to block in the areas.

This stage requires the most planning in terms of thinking ahead on how you want to execute your piece.

Because I know that I'm using colored pencil to create the detail and definition, this stage is all about making sure the general areas of tone are what I want them to be. It's also the point where I eliminate any unwanted whiteness of the paper from showing through. This will allow me to apply fewer layers of colored pencil to achieve a finished result, so I can focus on creating detail.

SoHo Watercolor Sets

Acrylic Touch

For the geometric element in my drawing, I'm using the Value Set of acrylic paints.

Acrylic paint works great when watered down to the consistency of ink, while remaining relatively opaque. This is also ideal for covering any areas my watercolor may have gone where I didn't want it, while providing a solid color, with fewer layers required to achieve it. Also, acrylic paint does not reanimate when completely dry. If I needed to go over some areas again with watercolor, near the areas with acrylic paint, I don't have to worry about the two colors potentially mixing together in an unwanted way.

Another bonus is, on thin layers you can still use colored pencil over the top for broad outlines and strokes.

Acrylic sets offer a large range of colors and sizes that provides excellent coverage, super saturated pigments, and dries to a lustrous finish. Details and Refinement

In the colored pencil stage of my process, I'm focusing on refining the color in areas and adding in detail. This is where the piece really starts to come to life.

Working in small sections, I can render areas of the feathers in the birds quite quickly because of the tonal groundwork the watercolor has already been established.

The SoHo Urban Artist colored pencils perform great in this mixed media scenario, sharpening to a point easily, and maintaining sharpness while working. The smooth application and high pigmentation are welcomed attributes of this colored pencil since vibrant color is an essential element in my work.

Jerry's Price: $1.79 - $62.99

Inking

The last step in my process is adding in some bold graphic lines using permanent India Ink. Using a liner brush, I applied it using single motion strokes for the beaks, and shorter strokes for the areas around heads and necks of the birds. Adding this element immediately gives the piece a more illustrative quality, while also testing the boundary of realism with the watercolor and colored pencil applications.

SoHo Artist India Ink

Jerry's Price: $4.99

Finish and Clean Up

Once I'm happy with the level of detail in all areas of my piece, I can remove the low-tack artists' tape from the edges of my paper by pulling it in a slow and controlled motion, away from the edge of the paper. With my drawing completed, clean up is a breeze using the disposable and biodegradable wipes for my brushes, palette, hands, and any spills.

Experimenting with mixed media applications is a fun and challenging way of creating artwork. There's virtually no limit to what you can achieve by using a little imagination and a willingness to think outside of the box.
