GRIZAYE DRAWING TIPS

There is no right or wrong way to render these sea shells, but following these tips may help you succeed in getting realistic results.

Define the darkest areas first to preserve the detail. Next, layer in your mid-tones keeping your brightest areas the color of the paper. Then, go in with your lightest colors. Use your blender to smooth transitions and to fill in the tooth of the paper. Use white to make your highlights pop. Go over all areas to deepen your tones to create a professional look. Good luck and most of all, have fun!

SARAH COGHAN'S TIPS

I wanted to add some additional thoughts on the kit. Maybe just as a white and a black pencil are recommended in addition to the selected palette of colors, it would also be good to recommend a blue, red, and yellow to "fine-tune."

SARAH COGHAN'S TIPS

Getting highlights and details/correcting mistakes: I found an electric eraser and a dry pen nib helpful. I used the pen nib because I like how I can cut an edge broader than that of my thin knife. (We also recommend a set of embossing tools to get just the right size, available in our store.)

SARAH COGHAN'S TIPS

Some other artists have a good method of simplifying sand, but when I tried to (for example, below the blue shell on the top left), I wasn't very happy and ended up reworking it a bit. The key is to keep the shapes and colors different. I'm not very good at doing that without following the reference photo closely.

SARAH COGHAN'S TIPS

Easiest shells to color: White scallops. Favorite shells to color: Brown-spotted white conical shells; they weren't too detailed and yet still looked nice. Hardest shells to color: Teal snail shells due to the complexity of all the patterns, colors, and highlights. I hope my pictures and videos will prove helpful.
